Mobilisation Episodes and Fiscal Capacity in the Long 19th Century, with Pantelis Kammas & Andreas Kakridis

Question: How do large military buildups influence state fiscal capacity?

Finding: Using Local Projections Difference-in-Differences (LP-DiD) on an unbalanced panel of 25 European and Latin American countries, 1816–1913, we find that large military buildups do not raise fiscal capacity immediately, but generate positive and persistent gains in the medium and long run.
